What recommendations would you make to scale-up or share your project more broadly (within an educational sector, or perhaps SUNY-wide)? We would be happy to share our experience with any SUNY institution or colleague who would like to implement the student-centered and modular course platform and learning/teaching approach that we developed. We would appreciate any connection with interested SUNY institutions or colleagues within them.
If you would like to create a community of practice within the SUNY Learning Commons, please describe "members of your community" who would be most interested in your outcomes. Please be specific (e.g., math faculty, instructional designers, student services, registrars, administrators, accreditation or assessment specialists). We have already presented on this project in multiple places, and we have applied to present at one more major conference. We intend to share our ideas and successes with our own university's online learning initiatives, colleagues in our department and beyond who are interested in online pedagogy, with fellow writing instructors around the country. In addition, we are interested in joining SUNY level communities of online instructors.
Do you intend to create an ongoing "Community of Practice" within the SUNY Learning Commons to continue work and dialog regarding this project? Yes
Overall, how successful was IITG in meeting your project goals? (You may elaborate on your response in the final question if not addressed elsewhere.) Very successful We believe that the grant support helped us do something we would not otherwise be able to do: we created a platform we will continue to use, resources that will benefit students, and a number of professional development opportunities for us. We have created a resource for our department and university, as well as an opportunity for our colleagues. We are grateful for this support.
